How I made a photo on one side and text on the other side

I used a portion of css code that looks like this: "position:relative; top: 0px; left: 0px;". This piece of code moves anything like text, images, videos, tables, etc. To move something up you must put a negative number on the attribute named "top". To move something down you must put a positive number in the attribute called "top". To move something right you must put a positive number in the attribute called "left". To move something left you must put a negative number in the attribute called "left". A working example of this code will look like this: "<h2 style="position:relative; top:-200px; left:500px;">Stanford is the best!</h2 >".
